By Karolyn A. Schalk Whether it's a big family gathering or a group of close friends, the best simple card games will be both enjoyable and entertaining for everyone. From matching colors to making your own memes, there is a wide range of card games to choose from. To limit your best option, you first want to consider both the age range and the size of your group. If you're playing with a mix of kids and adults, you can't go wrong with a familiar classic that's quick to learn and suitable for all ages, like Uno. On the other hand, if you're strictly looking for card games for adults, you might be better off with something a little edgier, like Cards Against Humanity or What Do You Meme?, two riotous games recommended for ages 17 and older. And while it may seem obvious, nothing can throw a wrench into your fun like trying to play a game that isn't size right for your group. For larger gatherings, you want to find something fast-paced where everyone has enough playing time. And while it can be difficult to find a game that's exciting for just two players, I've included two options below that are perfect for more intimate game nights. To help you find the best game for any occasion, I've read through Amazon reviews and researched dozens of options. My choices range from family-friendly classics to messy card games for adults, but all of them are engaging, easy to understand, and a good amount of playing time. Mattel Games Uno TinAmazonRecommend age: 7 and and of players: 2 or moreWhat makes it good: Suitable for both children and adults, Mattel's Uno is one of the most classic games of all time, and for good reason. Fast and fun, players match cards with either numbers or colors. The most coveted cards are the wild cards, which can be matched with anything. The first player to have one card left must call Uno to make his victory official. With 112 cards in total, this game can work for almost any group size. While it involves a little strategizing, it's easy to learn and perfect for never-ending fun. What the fans say: Classic game. It should be in any parents/kids game night. Easy rules so even younger children catch quickly. We have an 11 year old and she likes this game. 2The Best Two-Player Game: BlinkRecommended age: 7 and upNumber of players: 2What makes it great: For another fast and reflex-based game that works for two players, Blink is a fantastic option. The first player to get rid of his pile of cards by matching colors, shapes and numbers wins. Although this card game is simple enough for most ages to get on board, it won't really work well for more than two players. So if you're planning for a larger group, you might want to consider another pick. What the fans say: I love this game, it's easy to play and learn. It's fast so you don't necessarily have to have much time on your hands. Its great mental stimulation and can get super competitive! 3The most popular game on Amazon: Cards Against HumanityCards Against humanityAmazonRecommended age: 17 and upNumber of players: 4 or moreWhat makes it good: For larger groups made up of adults, cards against humanity can definitely break the ice. With over 33,000 reviews and close to a five-star rating, this game is known to make even the shyest person come off. The instructions are simple: one player draws a black card, which has a question or a fill-in-the-blank statement, and the other players respond using one of their white cards, which has possible answers. During each round, the black card is awarded to the person with the best white card answer, and the player with the most black cards at the end is the winner. The set contains 500 white cards and 100 black cards for lots of variety. You can also switch up the rules if you want. Just be sure to note that this game is definitely NSFW. What fans say: Cards against humanity is a very interesting and fun game to play with friends with lots of different types of humor. Honestly I heard about the game and thought it would be nice to try it but it exceeded my expectations and every time I have a blast playing this game with friends. 4The best for the parties: What do you do Meme? Recommended age: 17 and upNumber of players: 3 or moreWhat does it do well: If you are looking for a game to keep the party going, What do you do Meme? is an excellent choice. The rules are simple: a photo card (aka a meme), and each player must reply with one of the caption card. For each round there is a new judge to choose the winning caption. With over 75 photo cards and 435 caption cards, play time can go anywhere from 30 to 90 minutes. To really mix things up, you can even use your own photos to play with the caption cards. Perfect for bigger parties with friends, you can count on this NSFW game to give a ton of laughter. What fans say: I surfed the internet for a fun group card game that wasn't short against humanity when I came across this gem. My family and I splash heavily into memes so I knew this would be a good fit. I planned a party specifically around playing this and when the day finally came, it was totally worth it. Every round there was so much laughter that we couldn't speak. The [mature] content cards are separated from the rest of the deck but she mixed them up and it was great. 5Also helpful: The Ultimate Book of Games For a classic deck of cardsUltimate Book of Card GamesAmazonRecommended age: VariesWhat makes it great: If you have a traditional deck of cards and are looking for some fresh games to play, this Ultimate Book of Card Games is a fantastic guide. With over 350 game instructions, this book provides many options that are suitable for all different ages. The book also contains instructions and illustrations that make the games easy to learn. The chapters are arranged according to the number of players, so it's easy to find the perfect game no matter how many people you've invited to game night. What the fans say: Lots of great information about almost every card game out there. Glad I bought this book.
